Nominated by: Rachel Wilson-Roussell & Patrick Hamel, Sustainability Program, CDPHE

V.G. Burgers is a plant-based fast food restaurant in Boulder that lets customers eat their way toward sustainability. The restaurant's green attributes include the following: the menu offers only plant-based food, the restaurant is 100% wind powered, its food containers and utensils are all made from compostable, biodegradable plant starch (potato, corn, and sugar cane), and the restaurant itself is zero-waste, having no trash cans. V.G. Burgers donates all left-over food to local animal rescue efforts.
